GENEALOGICAL NOTES

OF THE

PROVOST FAMILY

FROM 1545 TO 1895.

BY

ANDREW J. PROVOST.

NEW YORK :

Wm. J. Brown

“So, beyond the river of time that flows between, walk the brave men and the beautiful women of our ancestry, grouped in the twilight upon the shore. Distance smooths away defects, and, with gentle darkness, rounds every form into grace. It steals the harshness from their speech, and every word becomes a song. Far across the gulf that ever widens, they look upon us with eyes whose glance is tender, and which light us to success. We acknowledge our inheritance; we accept our birthright; we own that their careers have pledged us to noble action. Every great life is an incentive to all other lives; but when the brave heart that beats for the world loves us with the warmth of private affection, then the example of heroism is more persuasive, because more personal.

This is the true pride of ancestry. It is founded in the tenderness with which the child regards the father, and in the romance that time sheds upon history.”

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS.

DEDICATORY PREFACE.

In this free Republic, where the citizen, however poor and unknown, is "every inch a king," pride of birth and ancestry, until recently, was so rare, that it was quite uncommon to meet such "kings" able to tell who were or whence came their grandparents. But as the age of government and the wealth of its people increase, we find, among the cultured especially, many who desire to know, and hand down to their posterity, the names, station in life, and the positions of honor and trust which their forefathers bore and filled prior to their migration—during the colonial period—and the heroic parts they acted in the war for liberty, which resulted happily in the Federal Union, our Nation's birth.

The writer of these notes, in his early manhood, listened with greedy ear to many legends concerning those of his name, who long since had returned to mother earth; their acts and doings of merit and heroism in the old world; the sorrowing causes of their leaving home and kindred; their privations, sufferings, and manly fight for existence; and their final success deservedly winning ennobling and prominent stations in the public service as well as high social distinction in the New World.

These stories fascinated his mind and filled his soul with an irresistible longing to know all that could be ascertained about their lives and history, and to trace his blood back through these grand men of past centuries. With this object, the aged of the family were called upon to refresh their recollections, to gather together such data as they were able, and thus preserve unrecorded facts. Colonial histories, the records of States, counties, cities, churches, family books, Bibles and tombstones, all things in all places likely to contribute, were carefully examined and extracts and transcripts taken therefrom. In fact, nothing was omitted which would tend to make this work accurate and complete. From time to time, however, obstacles prevented its completion; but the compiler never lost sight of or gave up his purpose, and several times during the past thirty years this work has been resumed as an imperative duty, only to be again put aside for some more convenient occasion. Yet, during the period in which each searching-spasm lasted, he gathered some new facts and data, and believes the work to be as perfect as is now possible.

It has been deemed wise to confine this work to the limits proper for genealogical notes, with rare exceptions. The omissions, especially of dates, if any exist, are more likely to relate to those who lived during the present, than those of former generations. In colonial times, every man counted: births, marriages, meritorious acts, and the death record were more carefully preserved than are those of this age.

Much labor, time, and some money have been spent in collecting and verifying the data used; but neither has been wasted if its readers take half the pleasure in perusing this record that was enjoyed by the compiler while engaged in this labor of love.

To those of his name, of the present and future, he dedicates this volume, with the hope that each will from time to time add his or her quota thereto, thus extending his or her branch of the family—as a birth, marriage, or death may occur—down the ages. That this may be readily done, and that each may be able to trace his or her distinctive line, without any chance of mistake, back to its source in this country, and so through the Holland family to that of William Prévost, of France, in 1545, this work has been subdivided into distinct parts, one for each of the children of David Provost, the first of the family in the Western Hemisphere.

While this is a departure from the usual method, it seems to be the one which will best enable the successors in this work, without difficulty, to carry out such purpose of continuing this record.

The writer gratefully acknowledges his indebtedness to the late E. R. Purple, whose accurate record of the Provoost family of New York was of great assistance in this work; and also to Miss Alice Provost, of Trenton; Dr. D. E. Provost, of Sing Sing; Mr. Frederick Provost, of New Brunswick; Rev. Peter Provost, of Freehold; Andrew J. Provost, Jr., of Brooklyn; and many others of the family, for valuable data so cheerfully and promptly furnished.

ANDREW J. PROVOST.

New York, 1895.

*To whom we owe a filial love, with gratitude we turn
And offer homage, ever due to dust in memory's urn.*

*By them to us has been transmitted an heritage to prize:
A name unsullied, brave example, homes, and tenderest ties.*

*An age of hurry and confusion, all vanished lives would hide,
At once! then, we must place on record their names ere these have died.*

Three centuries have left their trace upon the world's disfigured brow Since persecution made their race to internecine warfare bow.

*True, honest sons of Normandy, your home would yet be France,
Had not Queen Cath'rine's perfidy launched forth Bartholomew's lance.*

As exiles, God your steps did guide unto that other land, Where firm conviction such as yours had loosed a tyrant's hand.

*No need was there to hide the sign which your escutcheon bore:
"Pro-Liber-ta-te" there was felt, as it ne'er had been before.*

*But Flanders was too small a land, and too much compassed round
By tyrant Kings and enemies to the faith that they would found;*

*So when the Burghers started out with their wives to this new land,
The Huguenot whose name we bear, went with them hand in hand.*

*And settling here on a little isle, where a city grand now rises,
He toiled away and won that fame which an honest race most prizes.*

*It was he from out of whose loins we sprang, whose remembrance we ever should cherish,
And the names of his children, and theirs after them, we ought never to suffer should perish.*

Dedication.

*To memories, then, of those whose names rest in this little book,
We dedicate the services which sought in every nook*

*For every fact and name and date, and wrote them as we found them,
And set them up in type to print, and when on paper, bound them.*

CHAPTER I.

The family of which this is a record is of French origin. It was an ancient one long prior to 1572, having branches in Paris, St. Aubin, and Rouen.

The name was variously spelled Prèvost, Provost, and recently Prèvot, and is common in Normandy and other parts of France to this day.

In many countries this name has, for centuries, been a title of distinction; and the name itself proves the family to be one of the oldest and best.

In France it was the title of its judges; in Scotland, that of the mayor of a city; in England and church law, that of president or chief; in Germany, a Protestant dean or archpriest; and in almost all countries of the civilized world the "Provost Marshal" is a high and important officer, having summary powers in the army and navy.

The first of our ancestors whom, individually, we are able to trace is Guillaume (William) Prèvost; that he so spelled his family name we think is established beyond reasonable question. That the Prèvost became "Provoost" in Holland and New Amsterdam, 1572 to 1664, and "Provost" after the latter became New York and part of an English colony, is only the happening of the inevitable. But as Prèvost in French, Provoost in Dutch, and Provost in English are identical in meaning, those of the family have a perfect right to adopt whichever method they prefer. [See Note D.]

The Bishop wrote his name Provost until he was nearly forty years of age; then, probably wishing to be identified with the Dutch, rather than the English, of New York, he first began to use the extra "o." [See Vol. 18, N. Y. Gen. and Bio. Rec.]

The writer owns one, and has seen several finely bound books, once a part of the Bishop's library, in which was the family coat of arms as a book-plate, with the name Samuel Provost in the scroll. Most of the descendants of the Bishop and of "Ready Money" have continued to write the name Provoost. But the larger part of the family have for more than a century adopted the English form, Provost. Because of this fact, and the fact that such spelling brings it nearer the French, from whose soil we first came, we have thought best to use that mode of spelling the name throughout our record.

I. In 1572, William Provost, born in 1545, was a resident of Paris, a person of distinction and eminence among the then Protestants of France. That he was a man of noble blood, of considerable wealth and education, we assume from his coat of arms, its suggestive motto, and the fact that he was deemed worthy of the political and religious persecution which drove him from his native land. At this time, while Charles was King, the real ruler of France was Catherine de' Medici, his mother. His subjects were Catholic and Huguenot in their religious convictions, and among both were men of high political station, each side using all their political sagacity, power, and often intrigue, to gain a political advantage over the other. Charles was a mere puppet in the hands of his mother, and so were the leaders of these religious factions. To retain control of the reins of Government, she encouraged and inflamed the hatred of each toward the other, promising her support now to one, and again to the other, until, as she had expected and intended, a religious warfare ensued in which her political enemies effectually destroyed each other.

History records "that under her malignant influence the most eminent Protestants of the kingdom were lured to Paris and other large towns, she intending and expecting their destruction; that during the night of August 24, 1572, from fifty to seventy thousand were assassinated by Jesuit mobs." This wholesale murder is known as the "St. Bartholomew Massacre."

Those who escaped death fled the country. William Provost and his intended bride, shortly after their escape, settled in Holland, where, in 1574, they married and had issue.

His son, Johannes, however, was a scholarly man, who, as clerk to the several Courts of the colony, became widely known. His career, and such of his descent as we have been able to trace, will be found in Chap. VI.
- 9 (3) ii. JOHANNES PROVOST, b. 1605.

10 (3) iii. DAVID PROVOST, b. in Amsterdam, Holland, August 10, 1608; came to New Netherlands in 1624, two years before the Island Manhattan (now the city of New York) was purchased of the Indians. In 1626 he returned to Holland, and in 1630 there married Margareta, daughter of Gillis Ten Waert, a prominent and wealthy Holland merchant. Upon her marriage, her father gave her 14,000 guilders as a nuptial portion, and settled upon her the payment, yearly, of 750 guilders in life rents. This sum was paid to her annually until the year 1700, as appears in an annual record kept by the Colonial authorities: "Grietje, the wife of David Provoost, is still living."

A guilder, in those days, had a purchasing power in the new colony equal to $5.00 at the present time.

David Provost, realizing the benefits to be derived and the renown to be won in the New World, persuaded his young and wealthy spouse to come with him, and they arrived at New Amsterdam in 1634. From all accounts, he was a man of culture and fine personal appearance, and had received a military and civil education greatly exceeding most of his day. He soon made a name and fame, both in civil and military life, in the infant colony. By the records of the time, we find him a teacher, speaking Dutch, French, English, Latin, and the languages of several of the Indian tribes, and also a lawyer practicing in the Courts. Gov. Kieft came into power in 1638, and January 5, 1640, appointed him Commissary of Provisions and Tobacco Inspector—a new office created because a large part of the mercantile traffic was paid for in tobacco. [Mrs. Lamb's Hist. of N. Y., p. 90.]

In 1640, as commander of a force of 50 or 60 men, he was sent to take possession of the Fresh River that runs into the Sound (Connecticut). At or near Hartford he built "Fort Good Hope" and several houses—a strong military post. While in command at this important station (1640-1647) he had some stirring conflicts with the English, by whom he was considered as "a thorn in their flesh," and, whether with pen or sword, he was ever found equal to the occasion. His stubborn defense when assailed, and his immediate and successful sorties upon their retreat, were made the theme of many a bitter complaint on the part of the British Colonial authorities. [Vols. 1-2, Col. Hist.] Gov. Kieft, however, warmly approved his diplomatic policy as well as his brave and speedy acts of retaliation, and officially reported them as proving

“That it were good to commit such a trust to skilful men, and not to ignorant boyes.” Many incidents showing his bravery and ability as a commander are given by Purple and others; among them we note the following:—

“A female negro slave, in September, 1646, fled from her English master to Fort Good Hope and begged protection. The English authorities demanded that, as she was a fugitive, not a prisoner of war, she be surrendered, which being refused, an attempt to take her by force was successfully resisted by Commander Provoost.” [O’Callaghan, N. N., Vol. I., p. 378.]

This fact is cited by Thomas Nelson Page (“Old South”) as the first case of refusal to surrender a fugitive slave.

In 1647, at his own request, he was recalled by Gov. Kieft, and resumed his old vocations. He was the second notary public appointed, then an office of profit and trust, requiring considerable legal knowledge. [Val. Man., 1863, p. 569.]

February 2, 1652, he was at the head of the “Nine Men” of the city of New Amsterdam. By their commissions it was declared “what they did should be the act of the whole people.” They preceded the Burgomasters and Schepens in the municipal form of government, and held their sessions in the school-room of David Provost. [Purple, p. 7.]

These nine men were the first to dispute the autocratic powers of the Governor. They insisted that they were the chosen representatives of a free people; that no tax could be imposed without their sanction; that, in fact, they were the legislative body of the Government. A stubborn and lengthy fight ensued. Every man of the nine was found worthy of his trust. The Governor was finally forced to yield, and the foundation of freedom was thus firmly erected in this infant colony.

May 23, 1653, with two others, was appointed by Gov. Stuyvesant Commissioner to investigate the alleged conspiracy of the Dutch and Indians against the English. [Vol. I., p. 252, Col. Hist.] April, 1654, appointed Sheriff of Brooklyn and other Dutch towns on Long Island; and 1655, Secretary and Clerk of those towns and their Courts, all of which offices he held until his death.

For many years he was either a member of the Governor’s Council or of the Assembly, and seems to have been a popular and successful leader among the people, from his arrival in 1634 to the date of his death.

In 1639 he purchased quite a tract of land near the junction of Pearl and Fulton Streets, upon which he built a house, in which he and his descendants lived for many years. He built several houses in the "Princess Graft," now Broad Street. He built a house on Long Island in 1641, and in 1643 obtained a grant of a tract of land in New Amsterdam.

From several powers of attorney executed by him prior to his going to Hartford, and subsequently, "to manage his plantations and collect his rents in New Netherlands, as well as the life rents coming to his wife from an uncle in France, and his own from Holland," it would appear that he had considerable property; though Valentine, in his Manual of 1853, says, "David Provoost never amassed any considerable wealth, but brought up a large family, and his descendants were distinguished for intelligence," etc., etc. He died, May 12, 1657, leaving his widow Margaretta. In 1680 and 1700 she executed deeds to her sons, Jonathan and Julius, conveying to each a house and lot on the east side of "Princess Graft." [See Lib. 23, pp. 260, 304.] And in 1703 she is recorded as an inhabitant of the city, having a family and two slaves. We have no record of her birth or death; she lived, however, to a great age—more than 73 years after her marriage to David. Her facsimile signature, as written in 1662, is in Valentine's Manual, 1863, among those of the distinguished of the colony.

In our researches were found in the Dutch records many quaint incidents: among others, we note the result of a lawsuit in which David Provost was defendant. The complaint was about a "yawl." The decision of the Court, 1650, is as follows: "Judgment for Defendant, and the owner of the boat shall row David Provoost across the river and back, in the cold weather of next winter."

From the records—Church and State—it appears that Mrs. Provost had a sister named Agnietje in the colony as early as 1647. This sister, then a widow, married John de La Montagne, a French Huguenot, who was for many years one of the foremost men of the colony. These sisters, when writing their names, strictly kept the Dutch method and fashion of that day. Mrs. Provost was known as "Grietje Gillis," or "Grietje Gillis Ten Waert;" but there was generally added thereto "wife of David Provoost;" while her sister was known as "Agnietje Gillis," or "Agnietje Gillis Ten Waert," to which was added "wife of John de La Montagne." Anneke Jans (meaning Anna, the daughter of John) is the name by which Mrs. Dominic Bogardus was known during her whole life; and even to this day she is better known by that name than that of Mrs. Bogardus. The daughters of Gillis Ten Waert, however, being of a higher social class than most others in the colony, added the full name of their father, and were known as Grietje and Agnietje Gillis Ten Waert, wife of, etc.

We have no further record of Margareta Provost (11) or of her descendants. Purple, in his notes, states that she received two land patents—one for 25 morgans (50 acres) at Amersfoort (Flatlands), issued June 1, 1657; the other for 20 morgans at Midwout (Flatbush), issued May 1, 1660. This is clearly a mistake. Her mother, then a widow, with considerable means, was then purchasing real property; she bought the plot she gave her son Jonathan, August 12, 1662, and was undoubtedly the patentee.

- 16 (4) ii. WILLIAM PROVOST, b. in N. A. before 1641.

We have but little data concerning this son. His name appears as a citizen in Gravesend in 1656, and in New York City (Baker) 1698. He, without doubt, never married.

- 26 (4) x. GILLIS PROVOST, b. N. A.; bap. Mar. 26, 1656; mar. June 9, 1680, Maria Hibon.

Was engaged as a merchant in New York. His mother, in 1700, conveyed to him a house and lot in "Princess Graft." In his will, proven July, 1709, he is called Julius Provoost; leaves his whole estate to his widow, names no children, and probably left none.

AND
CATHARINE LAURENS.

CHAPTER II.

- 27 (4) DAVID PROVOST (18), b. November 20, 1642, at Fort Good Hope; was bap. N. Y., September 30, 1645, by Dominie Bogardus, his godfathers being Gov. Kieft and Johannes de La Montagne. The latter was a learned man, who came to this country with Gov. Kieft to assist in his Council, and became a power in the colony. He married, in 1647, Agnietje Gillis Ten Waert, the sister of Grietje, wife of David (10).

In 1674 he lived in the Smith Street (now William), between Hanover Square and Wall Street, and was a member of the Old Dutch Church.

September, 1694, was chosen Assessor of the Dock Ward, and held that office until 1698. From 1698 to 1708 was an Alderman; 1699 to 1702, was member of the General Assembly; 1707, Justice of the Peace.

He was a witness of the baptism of Catharine (496), daughter of David Provost and Christina Praa, August 28, 1720.

Prior to his decease, he prepared a written statement, in Dutch, giving the names, date and hour of birth, etc., of his children. This paper was, in 1724, translated and used by his son, the Mayor, in the compilation of a family history. [See note A.]

He was a prosperous merchant in the city of New York, assessed $3,000, when less than thirty years of age. In civil life he was esteemed for his rare abilities and christian virtues.

In Valentine's Manual, 1858, p. 642, a facsimile of his signature, written in 1702, "David Provoost, Sr.," is given among those of the then distinguished men of New York.

May 16, 1668, married Tryntje (Catharine) Laurens, at Midwout (Flatbush). She was born in Amsterdam, November 14, 1650.

- 87 (5) DAVID PROVOST (28), b. in Pearl Street, near Fulton, New York City, January 16, 1670; bap. January 23, 1670, his grandmother, Margaretta Provost, being his godmother; mar. June 1, 1691, Helena Byvanck of Albany; 2d, January 28, 1699, Maria De Peyster, widow of John Spratt; 3d, May 15, 1708, Elizabeth Wakeman, widow of Albert Dinny, of Fairfield, Conn.

The families of his three wives were among the most wealthy and distinguished in the country. Of his second wife, Maria de Peyster, Purple says: "This lady, whom we regard, by reason of her birth and alliances, as one of the most remarkable women born in New Amsterdam, was thrice married; and it is hazarding little, of historical accuracy, to say that a complete account of her family connections, by birth and marriage, would include a fuller history, of the civil and military affairs of colonial times, than the same account of any other person born during the Dutch possession of Manhattan Island."

The Rev. Samuel Wakeman of Fairfield, Connecticut, father of his last wife, was a graduate of Harvard, a man of culture, and left a large landed estate, much of which is still owned by his descendants.

He had no children by either of his last two wives. His father lived until about 1724, and was known as David Provoost, Sr., and he as David Provoost, Jr.

He was a prominent merchant in the city of New York, and for many years largely in the public service of the city and colony. Valentine, in his City Manuals of 1856 and 1864, gives facsimiles of his signature; 1696, elected Chamberlain and Treasurer, and held these offices till 1699, when he was elected Mayor to succeed his brother-in-law, Johannes De Peyster, and also Recorder. In a letter dated November 29, 1700, the Earl of Bellomont, then Governor, says, "David Provoost, the Mayor of the city, has been appointed Recorder, and I take it as wholly inconsistent that one man should hold both offices at the same time" [Vol. IX., Col. Hist., 809-811]; 1699, he, as Mayor, laid the corner-stone of the new City Hall, in Wall Street, at the head of Broad. It was built upon ground given for that purpose by his brother-in-law, Abraham De Peyster, Mayor, 1691-93. Part of the material used in its construction was taken from the old Dutch fort. The Hall was completed in 1700, and a picture of it is seen at page 460, Vol. II., of Gen. Wilson's Hist. of N. Y.

This building was also known as Federal Hall during the time it was occupied by the National Government. Here Congress held its sessions, and it was in this building that Washington, our first President, was inaugurated; 1700, was Captain of a regiment of foot; 1711, Major; and 1718, Colonel; was a member of the General Assembly from July 2, 1711, to December 12, 1712; and from June 5, 1716, until his death. He was also a member of the Councils of Governors Lovelace, Ingoldsby, and Hunter.

By a careless mistake he was the direct cause of the creation of the Court of Chancery in this country. It appears that, intending to give a note for £400, he signed one for £4,000. (In those days a note contained an agreement that, upon default in its payment, judgment, as upon confession, might be taken, and imprisonment for common contract debts then prevailed.) May 11, 1711, Governor Hunter asks the home government "for the appointment of a Court of Chancery, to take into consideration matters for which there is no relief at common law; particularly the case of Mr. Provoost, one of the Council, who had been a close prisoner, * * * having unwarily confessed a judgment for £4,000, the debt being, evidently, not over £400."

The Court was instituted and the mistake satisfactorily adjusted before April, 1712; 1705, petitions Gov. Cornbury, as a merchant, for relief from foreign coin, which is ruinous to business [Vol. IV., Col. Hist., 1135]; 1706, appointed commissioner by Gov. Cornbury, to pay funds for fortifying the city [Ibid., 1185]; 1709, appointed by Queen Anne member of Gov. Hunter's Council; 1714 to December, 1724, collector of duties and tonnage, &c., of port of N. Y.; 1723, appointed commissioner to locate line between New York and Connecticut; 1724, appointed by General Assembly to examine acts passed since Gov. Burnet's arrival; 1724, he wrote the family record, as to which see Note A; 1725, his will is proven [Lib. 10, p. 22., N. Y. Co.]. The exact date of his death we do not know.

April 13, 1701, "David Provoost & Co." obtained a patent for a large tract of land in Ulster Co. The quitrent, £5, was the largest sum paid for grants issued in that county prior to 1709.

Valentine, in his Manuals of 1853 and 1864, gives biographical sketches of Mayor Provoost, and states that he lived in Pearl Street in the original homestead of his grandfather, David (10). There are, however, several mistakes in both articles.

 111 (6) DAVID PROVOST (99), b. October 9, 1691; mar. December 12, 1723, Johannah, daughter of Barent Rynders. Her mother was Hester, the daughter of Jacob Leisler. Mrs. Provost was baptized July 21, 1706, and died December 8, 1749. Her death is suitably noticed in an obituary in the New York Gazette, December 11, 1749, as "a loving wife, tender mother, and good mistress; charitable to the poor, beloved by all who knew her," &c., &c.

He was an active and successful merchant in New York for more than half a century. During the French War he and Henry Holland, William Kelly, and John Leake jointly owned the privateer "Johnson," which captured a number of French vessels with valuable cargoes. In these enterprises, trading, and judicious investments in real property, he became immensely wealthy, and was known throughout the colony as "Ready Money Provoost." The fact that his father "unwarily" signed too much paper, and was kept in jail some time in consequence, may account, to some extent, for his son's ready cash methods.

Duer, in his "Life of Lord Stirling," states that "Ready Money Provost" was the husband of Maria Provost, who, after the death of her husband, married James Alexander; he also attributes his wealth to illicit trade, "made respectable by the restrictive system of the Mother Country." Lossing, who is usually correct, relied upon these errors and repeated them. Some years since, the writer convinced Mr. Lossing that the latter statement was as untrue as the former. In fact, Maria was not the wife of "Ready Money," but the wife of his cousin, Samuel; and that class of trade, extensively and boldly carried on by the merchants of New York, was effectually put down by the Governor, aided by David Provost, the father of "Ready Money," then Mayor—in 1700. It had ceased before "Ready Money" was ten years old.

He obtained from the New Jersey Colonial Assembly a grant of a large tract of land on the Raritan Bay (said to be 500 acres), now partly within the limits of Perth Amboy.

This splendid estate was, in his lifetime, called "Rudyard." His son John lived on this tract until his death in 1781. After the death of David (111) his Trustees, by deed, May 1, 1786, conveyed "Rudyard" to his grandchild, James Provost (141), the son of John Provost (117).

Upon a beautiful knoll, on the bluff, overlooking Raritan Bay, is the old family burying-ground in which the children of David Provost and many of their descendants peacefully rest.

In 1742 he purchased the "Louvre," a 90-acre tract on the East River, and there, upon the high bluff, near the present 57th Street, built an elegant country mansion. The compiler of these records several times visited this house in his boyhood. It was a house fit for a king, the most charming spot in or near New York. Long years after "Ready Money's" death the wood part of "Louvre" became as "Jones's Woods" the most famous picnic grounds known in the vicinity of New York.

He erected, in 1753, an elegant vault near his home. The remains of his wife, Johannah, as also his own, were therein deposited. For many years this vault was specially cared for, but in 1857 the house and vault were swept away by the march northward of our great city.

A picture of this mansion and the vault is to be found in Valentine's Manual of 1858, and at page 530 appears quite a history of the Provost family.

August 31, 1767, he married (2d) Sarah Boulton Loftis, and, December 6, 1777, he conveyed the "Louvre" to her, with power to convey the fee to any child of his sons, William and John [see Will, Lib. 34., p. 304]. He died October 19, 1791.

- 353 (5) WILLIAM PROVOST (58), b. September 27, 1679; mar. November 20, 1700, Aefje Van Exveen (bap. December 19, 1683), the daughter of Gerrit Cornelisz Van Exveen, a man of some wealth; lived in Wall Street. Facsimile signature, 1707, is in Valentine's Manual of 1858.

William Provost was a man of learning and distinction. As a merchant, he became wealthy, and in politics successful. In 1708 to 1711 was Assistant Alderman; 1723, at the request of Gov. Burnett, was appointed a member of the Council, and served until 1735.

In 1733, Gov. Crosby asks for his appointment as a member of the New Jersey Council: ("He would like to keep him in the Council of New York, but his estate is in New Jersey, and he would be of great aid to the Council there.") [Vols. V. and VI., Col. Hist.] In 1734 was appointed to the New Jersey Council. He purchased, in February, 1721, house and land next to the present old Dutch Reformed Church at Hackensack, and removed to that place about that time. He was collector of Bergen County from 1723 to 1725; in the New Jersey Assembly 1721, and in the Council from 1734 to 1741.

In 1725 was known as Col. Provost; 1739, had charge of military affairs in Bergen County, and the same year was appointed Judge of the Pleas for Bergen County; 1740, a commissioner to settle the line between Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

His will was proven August 26, 1746. [Lib. 15, p. 619, New York County.]

The New Jersey Council was composed of James Alexander (father of the Earl of Stirling), who married the wealthy widow of Samuel Provost (381); Cornelius Van Horne, son of Elsjje Provost (29); William Provost, John Schuyler and Robert Hunter Morris. They were not only fearless but intellectual giants.

- 381 (5) SAMUEL PROVOST (85), b. January 8, 1687; mar. October 15, 1711, Maria, daughter of John Spratt. His brother David
(87) married her mother.

He became a wealthy merchant, and upon his death, in 1720 [See Will, Lib. 9, p. 139], his widow continued his business. She was a woman of rare abilities, and by her skill and close attention to business, became the most wealthy woman of the colony. January 1, 1721, she married James Alexander, the statesman, scholar, and lawyer, who for so many years was in the Councils of New York and New Jersey, and in the Assembly of New York.

Their son William, known as the Earl of Stirling, was the celebrated Major-General of the American Army of the Revolution; he married Sarah, daughter of Philip Livingston, sister of the then Governor of New Jersey.

Their daughter Catharine, married Major Walter Rutherford of the English Army, and their daughter Mary married Peter Van Brugh Livingston. Duer, in his life of the Earl of Stirling, speaks in the highest praise of Maria Provost Alexander; of her mental vigor, intelligence, and skill in business, and of her great liberality to those in need. How he came to call her the wife of "Ready Money Provoost," a mistake which Lossing copied, we cannot imagine.

Portraits of James Alexander and Mrs. Provost, taken shortly after their marriage, and also of the Earl of Stirling, will be found in Gen. Wilson's Hist. of New York, pp. 361, 356, 510, Vol. II. She died April, 1760.

The New York Mercury of September 28, 1767, announces the death of John Provost and his half-sister, Mary Livingston, at about the same hour, and adds: "Both deaths are universally lamented. Their remains were decently interred in the family vault, Trinity Church."

He was a rare penman, as will be seen by an examination of the manuscript referred to in note A, which is as distinct and legible as when written in 1742. To this copy of the paper, made by his uncle in 1724, we are indebted for certain and accurate data in the history of our family prior to 1638, which else would, probably, have been lost.

He was captured and held prisoner of war on board the British war-ship Asia. The petition of his mother, Eve Provost, to the American authorities to force his release is indorsed, "We cannot capture the Asia just yet." [New York Rev. Papers.]

392 (7) SAMUEL PROVOST (386), b. February 26, 1742; mar. June 6, 1766, Maria, daughter of Thomas Bousfield, Esq., of Laklands, Cork, Ireland; graduated at the head of the first seven in Kings (now Columbia) College, then occupying a frame building in Trinity Churchyard. In 1761 he went to England; entered St. Peter's College, Cambridge, where he graduated; in 1766 was admitted to orders in the Church of England. Returned to New York the same year, and assumed the duties of assistant rector of Trinity. This trust he resigned in 1775, because his views of the contest then impending between the colonies and the Mother Country were at variance with those of a majority of his congregation. He retired to a small farm near Claverack, then in Dutchess (now Columbia County), New York, which he purchased and named "East Camp."

He declined to be a delegate to the Provisional Congress of 1777, and also to be its chaplain—both because clergymen should not meddle in political matters. He also declined the proffered rectorship of several large and important parishes; among others, St. Michael's, at Charleston, S. C., and King's Chapel, Boston, Mass., giving as his reason that he was unwilling to avail himself of advantages over others of the clergy, arising from his stand for the freedom of his country. His letter declining the call to St. Michael's gives his reasons for declining to be chaplain of the Congress, and why he must decline their pressing call, is in the hands of John Moffat Provoost (345).

He did not lack courage, however; for he joined his neighbors in an armed pursuit of the English soldiers, who, October, 1777, burned Esopus.

Early in 1784, was unanimously elected rector of Trinity, and at once accepted. Three weeks later the degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by the University of Pennsylvania.

February 4, 1787, was consecrated to the Episcopacy, at Lambeth Palace, England, and was thus created the first P. E. Bishop of New York. In 1784 was appointed Regent of the University of New York; and in 1787, was appointed trustee of Columbia College.

In November, 1785, was elected chaplain of Congress, and served several years. After the ceremonies of Washington's inaugural at the old City Hall, in 1789, the President and civic authorities repaired to St. Paul's Church, where the religious services, deemed a fitting conclusion of the inaugural, were conducted by Bishop Provost.

Samuel Provost.

While Congress met in New York, the President, his family, and the officers of the Government, were communicants or attendants at St. Paul's until Trinity was rebuilt, and then of Trinity, wherein a canopied pew was set apart for the President.

Concerning the men of these times, Gen. Wilson says: "But chief among them, as a social figure, by reason of his office, as well as his social qualities and his undoubted patriotic sympathies, was the easy, good-tempered, gentlemanly, and scholarly Dr. Provoost, Bishop of New York. He had been devoted to the American cause; was a native of the city, of Dutch and Huguenot descent. In addition to his Hebrew, classic, and ecclesiastical lore, was familiar with French, German, and Italian. He was able to flavor his conversation at social gatherings with the elegancies of modern literature, as well as to edify men with the weightier matters of law."

He resided in an elegant home at No. 2 Nassau Street. In person he had a round, full face, was above the medium in stature, of portly figure, and very dignified in demeanor. An excellent likeness of the Bishop is seen in the memorial window at Trinity Church.

Upon the grand memorial doors, in bronze, given by the Astor family to Trinity, will be seen a representation of Bishop Provost in his robes of office welcoming President Washington at the door of St. Paul's, commemorative of the religious ceremonies of the inaugural.

He was public-spirited, hospitable, and so liberal to the poor as to infringe too deeply upon his moderate salary of £750 a year, with house-rent free. Among the court ladies of the time, Gen. Wilson names Mrs. Provost and Lady Stirling, and others of the Provost family, then of New York.

For items of interest concerning the Bishop we refer to Vol. XVIII., New York Gen. and Bio. Record; Rev. Mason Gallagher's Chapter of Unwritten History, 1888; Dr. J. W. Francis' "Old New York," p. 52; and Dr. Schroeder's Memoir of Bishop Hobart. The latter, among other things, says: "The motto of his ancient family escutcheon, 'Pro-libertate,' declared at once the sentiments of his Huguenot forefathers, and the feelings which they had transmitted to him through eight generations, from the middle of the 15th century to 1742."

Mrs. Provost died August, 1799. The Bishop resigned his rectorship September 8, 1800, and his bishopric in September, 1801. He died suddenly, September 6, 1815. [See Will, Lib. 52, p. 462.]

 452 (5) DAVID PROVOST (434), bap. September 24, 1689; mar. in 1712, Christina (born in 1693), youngest daughter of Capt. Peter Praa.

The father of Peter Praa (also Peter Praa), a Huguenot from Dieppe, France, resided in Holland some time, and in 1659 came in ship "Moesman" to this country with his family, consisting of a wife and several children. He settled in Bushwick, Kings County, and there died in 1668. Peter Praa, Jr., was born at Leyden, Holland, in 1659; he married, March 15, 1684, Maria (bap. June 4, 1651), widow of Joost Adrianszen Molenaar, daughter of Jacob Hay and Christina Cappaens. The latter was a remarkably shrewd business woman. At the time of her death, in 1693, she resided near the present Merchants' Exchange, New York City, on Stone Street, and was very wealthy for that period. Her property, most of it in New York and Kings County, she gave to the four daughters of Peter and Maria Praa, viz.:—

- 452a 1. CATHARINE PRAA, bap. September 4, 1685; prob. d. y.

- 453 2. Maria, bap. September 30, 1688; mar. August 17, 1705, Wynant Van Zant, one of the most prosperous merchants of the colony.
- 454 3. ELIZABETH PRAA, bap. May 13, 1691; mar. Jean Miserol, an émigré from Picardy, by the way of Holland, between 1657 and 1663. From this union comes the well-known Meserole family of New York and Kings County.
- 455 4. ANNETTIE PRAA, bap. November 14, 1694; mar. Jacob Bennett.
- 455a 5. CHRISTINA PRAA, b. 1693; bap. May 1, 1698; mar. David Provost (452).

Peter Praa and his family resided upon the bowerie of Christina Cappoens, which, by her will, she devised to his four daughters. The house was of the usual type of the best class of Dutch houses of that period. It was totally destroyed by fire in 1834. Its site is now marked by a dwelling built by David Provost (1008) in 1836, situated on the north side of Freeman Street, east of Oakland, Brooklyn.

Peter Praa, prior to his death, in 1740, was the owner of nearly all of the present 17th Ward of Brooklyn, most by purchase from heirs of Dirick Volkertzen and others. His above-named daughters were devised the balance by the will of their grandmother, Christiana Cappoens.

He also owned a large tract in Queens County, the site of Long Island City, then known as Dominie's Hook, from its first owner, Dominie Bogardus, whose wife, the celebrated Anneke Jans, purchased it in 1697. He also had large tracts in New Jersey and considerable in the city of New York.

We have no record of the death of David Provost (452). His wife, Christina, was, in 1760, a widow, and April 20, 1769, married Rev. John Arondius. She died in December, 1795, after an illness of only two days, aged 102 years.

From a deed executed by her in 1793, when she was over 100 years old, it appears that but two of her children were then living.

David Provost and Christina, his wife, resided on the Cappoens bowerie, in the Praa homestead, until his death, and she continued there until her marriage with Dominie Arondius.

In 1793 she deeded that house and one-half of her portion of the farm to Jonathan Provost (581), her son.

Praa, in his will, entails a burial-plot (now near India and Oakland Streets), in which he and his descendants were buried until the growth of Brooklyn prevented its further use for such purposes.

859 (8) ABRAM PRAA PROVOST (808), b. May 21, 1804; mar. Catharine Parker; 2d, Catharine Ann Vail; was a man of great energy. As contractor he built sections of the Harlem, Housatonic, and several railroads in New Jersey; he started the first parcel express from New Brunswick to New York. For ten years was Associate Judge, and for many years in the Board of Education in the city of New Brunswick. He was engaged in the grocery and shoe trade and as auctioneer in that city for a long time. He was a Freemason, and for over fifty years an Odd Fellow. During the last ten years of his life he did no business, but daily attended the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, fully believing that his aid was necessary for its prosperity, and dropped dead in front of its doors—dying in harness—July 22, 1892. He sleeps the sleep of the just beside the remains of his father, "Patriot and Saint."

917 (7) JOHN PROVOST (586), b. February 22, 1762; mar. October, 1785, Eve (b. February 19, 1766; d. February 23, 1854), daughter of Peter Calyer and Margaretta DeBevoise. Her father, Peter Calyer, was the son of Jacobus Calyer and Jane Meserole, the grandchildren of Peter Praa. She was born and, until marriage, lived in the house built by Derick Volkertsae, in 1640. It stood upon a knoll where about the present Calyer Street is now laid out, and from 100 to 200 feet west of the present Franklin Street, in the 17th Ward, Brooklyn. This spot, as remembered by the writer, was one of the most charming he has ever seen; the lawn sloped gradually in front to Bushwick Creek on the south, and to the East River on the south and west. The house was of stone, one and roof story, Dutch style, dormer windows, and had the old, quaint half-doors, with glass eyes and brass knockers. The farm, orchards, meadows, and buildings were equal to any of those primitive days, and gave evidence of the wealth and care of its owner. Here John Provost, with his war laurels fresh upon him, visiting his brother, Peter Praa Provost, who lived near by, met and won his beautiful kinswoman. After their marriage, and until his death, they lived upon the farm given him by his father—it being the house so long occupied by Peter Praa, and which was subsequently burned in 1834. John Provost and his four brothers enlisted as privates in the Army of the Revolution when mere boys, and served bravely to the end. His widow loved to talk of the heroic deeds of these boys and the wonderful escapes of her husband from capture and death, the great privations, losses in property, and sufferings endured by the family during this war.

John Provost was a man of education and culture, a devout christian, kind, gentle and liberal; he was known, respected and loved far and near.

Many years ago, George Ricard, then President of the Williamsburgh Savings Bank, a venerable man of near eighty, moving in the first circles of wealth and refinement, stated to the writer that in his early manhood he had been very intimate with John Provost, and upon all occasions of doubt sought his aid and advice. That during his long life and intimacy with men he had never met a more cultured or better informed gentleman, or one whose general knowledge, sense of honor, and integrity stood higher. He died August 3, 1832.

Provost, a man of education, culture, and of elegant size and proportions, soon after his marriage engaged in mercantile matters with success. He was ordained as minister of the Gospel of the Methodist Episcopal Church November 9, 1828, and subsequently established a Free Church in Jersey City, and for many years gave his services as a Minister and Physician to the afflicted in mind or body—freely ministering to their wants. A financial panic stripped him of his fortune, and nearly fifty years of age, and with a large family, mostly girls, he began the battle anew, and with such vigor, industry, and pluck, as insures success, and died October 12, 1869, leaving considerable property.

She was supposed to be in the most robust health, when she heard of the death of her sister, Nellie B.; she was visiting friends in Washington, D. C., and at once started for her home, in Brooklyn; she was devotedly attached to her deceased sister, and though Nellie's death had been for some time expected, the shock was so great that she could go only as far as Philadelphia, and died three days after learning the sad news.

He was a grand representative of the stock from which he came. In stature much over the average. At 72 he was, in mind and bodily vigor, apparently in the prime of life. Beginning life with little or nothing, by great industry and prudence, he raised a large family, and honestly earned and left quite a fortune. For many years he was a Justice of the Peace in Kings and Queens Counties, and though not educated to the bar, his good common sense and love of justice was such that he was regarded by all as the good and upright judge. He had a great love for children, and was never so happy as when his large house was filled with his descendants, big and little. He died suddenly of apoplexy, February 21, 1875.

 1341 (6) JOHANNES PROVOST (1329), b. December 28, 1707; mar. May 23, 1736, Elizabeth Youngs, of Oyster Bay, L. I.

Thomas Youngs, of Oyster Bay, was a man of distinction and wealth, and had considerable property at Oyster Bay, where many of his descendants still reside. His son, John Youngs, married January 30, 1690, Ruth Elliott, of Stamford, Connecticut, and settled and lived there until after 1710. He had two sons, Thomas and Samuel, and a daughter Elizabeth. Elizabeth was born at Stamford, May 30, 1710.

John Youngs, upon the death of his father, removed to Oyster Bay, and his daughter Elizabeth there married, in 1736, John Provost.

We can learn but little of the subsequent history of John and Elizabeth Provost, or how many children they had, or when or where born.

It is certain, however, that John Provost and his wife went to Stamford and resided there, probably upon land which Elizabeth inherited from her father, John Youngs.

The families of John Youngs, John Provost and Stephen Bishop were intimate socially, and also had business transactions with each other.

We find that James Youngs, who was a son of either Thomas or Samuel, is named in 1775, with Stephen Bishop, upon the Stamford Committee of Safety. The Reverend Stephen Bishop was widely known throughout the Colonies as a man of learning, wealth and patriotism. That the sons of John Provost were welcomed into such a family as sons-in-law goes far towards proving that they were men of good standing, socially and intellectually.

CHAPTER VI.

1600 (3) ELIAS PROVOST (8), b. 1602.

David Provost (28), in his genealogical notes written in 1724 (Note A), says: Elias (8) was the eldest brother of David (10), and had the same "scholarly education; that on coming to this country he settled at Fort Orange (Albany). Johannes Provost and his family, some living here in New York and some at Albany, are his descendants."

We have been unable to ascertain the date when Elias (1600) came to this country, or the date of the birth of Johannes, who, as would appear by the above record, was his only child.

1601 (4) JOHANNES PROVOST, b. probably about 1630, was Assistant Commissary of the Colony in 1653; is recorded as a man of "superior education, and a penman excelled by none in the country." In 1656 was appointed Secretary of Vice-Director Johannes de la Montagne, who married Agnietje Gillis, the sister of Margareta, wife of David Provost (10), and accompanied the Vice-Director to Albany, where he resided until 1680. While there he was, 1656 to 1664, Notary Public; 1664 to 1675, Secretary of Albany, Rensselaerswyck and Schenectady; 1678, Sheriff of Albany County.

For many years he was Clerk of the only Courts of the Colony. In 1688-1689 he was Assistant Alderman of the South Ward of New York City; was a member of the Council of Acting Governor Liesler in 1690, and was commissioned after the Schenectady massacre to proceed to Albany with 160 soldiers to take charge of the Fort at Albany and to control the affairs in that vicinity.

Upon the downfall of Liesler he was imprisoned and his property confiscated. On his release he went to The Hague, and after able, manly and persistent efforts his services in behalf of his late chief were rewarded by the British Government. The judgment of attainder against Liesler and his followers was set aside and their property restored.

Notwithstanding the serious charges made against Liesler, and those serving under him, no word derogatory to the honor and integrity of Johannes Provost is to be found in the public documents of that day. He is certified by the authorities to the British Government as "a merchant of New York City, of considerable estate, who has lived there these fifty years in good repute."

He married Sara, daughter of Major Abram Staats, Surgeon of Albany who was prominent in official life, 1644 to 1694, and largely interested in vessels navigating the Hudson; 2d, June 25, 1685, in New York, Sarah Webbers [see their joint Will, N. Y., Liber —, p. —]; 3d, July, 1687, Anna Mauritz. He was living in New York City in 1698.

He was a member of the Dutch Church of Albany, and probably all his children were there baptized. As no record of baptisms in this Church prior to 1683 are to be found, it is uncertain how many children he had, or when born. That he left descendants in Albany and in New York is asserted by David in 1724 (note A). He died in New York, and letters of administration were granted in March, 1706. Purple, p. 24, gives him credit for four children, one being Isaac, bap. in Albany, September 23, 1683. So far as we can we deem it safe to follow Purple.

CHAPTER VIII

Sir William Russell, desiring to drain the marsh and overflowed lands of his large estate, sent to Holland for expert engineers. Among those engaged for this important work was one of the descendants of William Provost, born in France, 1545; which one was so employed does not appear. It is certain that quite a settlement of Hollanders was formed at a place called "French Drove," Thorney, Cambridgeshire, England. In their engagement they stipulated for freedom in their religious views and worship. The tradition yet preserved among the descendants of this emigré to England is precisely the same as our own as to the escape of their ancestor from the St. Bartholomew Massacre and his refuge in Holland. This, and the data hereinafter recorded, was obtained from Samuel P. Provost (1834), a prominent flour merchant of Pittsburgh, Pa.

A John Provost, with his wife and family, came to America from Scotland; they settled on the Brandywine. Mr. Roderick Provost (1907), of Philadelphia, informs us that the ancestor of John Provost and his two brothers were driven from France; that his grandfather, many years ago, corresponded with his relatives, who then lived in New York. As there were not any of the name here, not of our family, it would thus seem that this Brandywine family were then recognized as a part of our own. We have, however, been unable to obtain the links which would connect them with the family in France in 1572, or with the descendants of that family.

The foregoing was received from the Rev. Joseph Provost, Pastor of the Protestant Episcopal Mission Church, of Springfield, Mass.

That Pierre, the father of Martin, was a Huguenot, and probably nearly connected with the family of William, of Paris, is believed by the Rev. Joseph; but at this late day it would be impossible to state if this is more than conjecture.

Note A.—When this work was nearly finished A. J. Provost, Jr. (1052), discovered an old manuscript, presented in 1890 to the Genealogical Society of New York, by Miss Elizabeth Jay, to whom it was given by Mrs. Colden. This paper is a copy, written in 1742 by John Provost, the father of Bishop Provost, of a record prepared by David Provost, Mayor of New York, 1699, bearing date March 25, 1724. It is yellow with age; but almost as perfect as when written in 1742. It begins: "A genealogy; or short collection of the family of David Provoost, of the City and Province of New York. * * * A true account of their descent and offspring, so far as it has come to my hands, and as much as I could gather and learn out of the several manuscripts left me by my ancestors since the year * * * 1572."

Here follows the statements: That Guilhelmus, or William Provost, born in Paris, then twenty-seven years of age, warned by a Colonel in the Army of the King, fled into Holland, thus escaping the St. Bartholomew Massacre, in which many of his family perished. His marriage in Holland, in 1574, with a French daughter, and the descent as we give it to (10). The coming of David (10) to this country in 1624; his return to Holland in 1626; his marriage, and the facts given by us down to his death. He adds that from what he has seen and learned from old papers, and from what has been told him by old people, David (10) was an extraordinary penman, perfect in orthography; had a liberal education, speaking Latin, French and Dutch equally well.

Then follows the marriage of David Provost (27), and the day and hour of the births of his children. The author states that the data concerning the marriage of his father, David Provost (27), and of his children was written in Dutch by his father, and translated by himself, and adds, "I shall note all the brothers and sisters of the family, their marriages, when and with whom, and how many children procreated to this date, March 25, 1724." He, however, simply added his several marriages and the data concerning his own family down to that date. His manuscript came into the hands of his nephew, John (385), who laments the death of his uncle before its completion, and promises to trace the family from 1724 to date, May 26, 1742. John, it is to be regretted, did not fulfill his promise, though he lived until 1767. An abstract, dated November 3, 1785, was written on one of the blank sheets, tracing the ancestors of John (385) from 1545 down to his birth. The handwriting of which resembles that of Bishop Provost. There are also annexed two original letters written by John in 1736 to his mother.

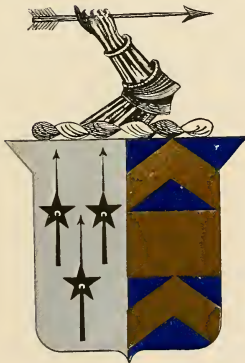

This paper, written by such an authority upon such evidence, has proven the truth of the family traditions. It establishes the fact, also, that the only persons of the name in this country, known to the several writers prior to 1742, were the descendants of David (10), and of those of Johannes, son of Elias (8).

The early data prior to 1630 must have been lost but for the preservation of this remarkable document. (See original at Berkeley Lyceum, N. Y., and copy which we have had made and filed with the Long Island Historical Society.)

Had the contents of this paper been known to the writer when he began this work very much of his labor would have been saved.

It would almost seem as if the author of this record had been inspired to keep John's promise and finish the work which our ancestral kinsman so well began in 1724.

Note B.—The Coat-Armor of the Provost family is very ancient; by whom or when conferred does not appear. Purple places it at the head of his notes of the family [Vol. VI., New York Genealogical and Biographical Record]. Gen. Grant Wilson, in his valuable History of New York [Vol. II., p. 166], gives a fac-simile, and in his address to the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society [see Vol. XVII. of their record] refers to it as the Ancient Arms of the Family, used by the Bishop while a student at Cambridge, and at page 3 gives a copy of the one used by the Bishop after his elevation; the warlike features being removed, the Bishop's Mitre and flowers taking their place. Doctor Berrian, in his sketch of Trinity Church, page 197, says: "In some of the old books which came down to the Bishop is the Provoost Coat-of-Arms, with the motto, 'Pro Libertate;' * * * it was undoubtedly borne by his family in remote times."

The second example, in colors, is a copy of the original in the Astor Library, which has the following foot note:—

"The Arms we give were those borne by the Venerable and Right Reverend Samuel Provoost, first Protestant Episcopal Bishop of New York. He descended in the fifth degree from the original colonist, David Provoost, a Huguenot, who came to New Amsterdam by the way of Holland. * * *

"The Provoosts, or rather Prévosts or Provosts (as they must have been called in their native land), came originally from Normandy, where the name is still largely represented.

"Our example is copied from a book-plate engraved by Maverick in 1769, and undoubtedly copied from old and trustworthy documents. * * *

"We are induced to think that we have here a clear example of French Heraldry, showing not a marriage, but the juxtaposition of two shields, having belonged successively to the Provost name in Europe. Of course the Bishop used a mitre as his crest. The crest we give is furnished from another source.

"Arms: party, per pale.

"First: argent, three arrows, points upwards, each one enfiled through a pierced mullet, sable.

"Second: azure, a bar, between two chevrons, or.

"Crest: an arm embowed in armor, the hand proper, grasping an arrow fessways.

"Motto: 'Pro Libertate.' (For Liberty's Sake.)"

The crests of both these Coat-Armor, the closed visor, the mailed arm, and the darts or arrows held to strike, as well as those piercing, are each strongly suggestive that these devices were adopted at a period when such implements were used by combatants, and the rights to the honor were probably granted during the crusades, from the 11th to the 14th century.

This view is strengthened from the well-known habit of knights, during that period, to carry or wear some distinctive motto, suggestive of what he had done or borne, or would do or suffer, for the cause he had espoused.

We can well imagine the trials undergone, the perils dared, and the heroic deeds performed by our valiant ancestor knight for liberty's sake, during his various crusades, when such deeds were regarded as the most ennobling.

To William, of Paris, and his descendants, while seeking new homes in Holland, in the wilds of a new world, and in the struggle for independence; in the privations and sufferings endured, and in the dangers braved, "Pro Libertate" was the most appropriate of mottoes.

The fact that we have not been able to ascertain from what country or potentate we owe this badge of honor, is of less importance now than it would have been a century ago; that the title was good and its source well known in 1769, when Samuel Provost, then a student at Cambridge, had it engraved, and began to use it as his Armorial Book-Plate, can scarcely be questioned. His college associates were sons of Britain's nobles. They, as well as the titled families with whom he was connected by marriage, must have been well versed in heraldic lore. Maverick, who engraved it, was, unquestionably, an expert in questions of title.

That it has been conspicuously used as of right by those high in honorable service in the Colonial Courts of this country, and their descendants for more than two hundred years, without fair challenge, ought to be deemed sufficient to settle any question of doubt as to the sufficiency of our title.

That Bishop Provost knew the title to be perfect must be conceded by all. No man of his time had a keener sense of honor. No man enjoying, as he did, the most elevated position in Church and lay society, could possibly (as he did), for nearly fifty years, emblazon, upon books, manuscripts and papers owned, signed and issued by him, such a device and claim to a title which was in the slightest degree doubtful.

Note C.—From the earliest colonial period the Provost family occupied a conspicuous place among those of culture, wealth and power in the New World. Prior to the overthrow of the Dutch, in 1664, David Provost (10) held almost every office, military and civil, which the authorities could confer. Under the British his descendants were in like manner honored.

David Provost (27), from 1694 to 1708, was continually in the public service as Assessor, Alderman and Member of the General Assembly.

David Provost (87), from 1695 till his death 1725, occupied the offices of Treasurer, Chamberlain, Alderman, Recorder, Mayor, Member of Assembly, and was a member of the Councils of Governors Lovelace, Ingoldsby and Hunter.

William Provost (353) was in the Councils of Governors Burnet, Crosby and Lewis, from 1722 to 1740.

David Provost (111), known as "Ready Money," was a Merchant Prince.

Elsje Provost (29) married Gerrit Van Horne, a merchant of great wealth, for many years in the Assembly.

Maria Provost (59) married Abram Van Horne, also a wealthy merchant, and in the Governors' Councils from 1723 to 1741. Their daughter Maria (60) married Sir William Burnet, Governor of New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and New Hampshire from 1720 to the date of his death, and who had for godfather the King of England.

Maria, widow of Samuel Provost (381), married James Alexander, the most distinguished lawyer and statesman, and for many years in the Councils of the Governors of New York and New Jersey. Their second son, known as "Earl of Stirling," was a patriot and a Major-General of the American Army of the Revolution.

Samuel Provost (386), one of the most accomplished gentlemen of his time, Bishop of New York, was the intimate friend of Washington, Hamilton, Franklin, Jay and Morris.

With so many of the family distinguished members of City, State and Federal Government, they must, having the wealth to support such positions, have been among the first in the select society of the Colonial Court.

Male and female, they intermarried with the Van Hornes, Rutgers, De Peysters, Beekmans, Leislars and Gouverneurs of the Dutch, and with the Burnets, Alexanders, Livingstons, Acklands, Bousfields and Coldens of the British aristocracy.

For a century prior to the Revolution the family is recorded as among those distinguished in the social, military and political history of the Colonies of New York and New Jersey. Independence brought peace. Congress held its sessions in New York. President Washington there held his Republican Court. The ceremonies of his inauguration, which began in Federal Hall, were finished in St. Paul's by the religious part, there performed by Bishop Provost; and during the time in which Congress met in New York the President, Cabinet, Members of Congress and Foreign Embassadors, as well as the first families of the then Capitol, were attendants and communicants of Trinity, gratified by the eloquent sermons of the Bishop. The families of the President, Hamilton, Jay, Morris, etc., etc., and those of the Bishop, and of the Earl of Stirling, were on the most intimate social terms.

The loyalty of the family, generally to the patriotic cause of the colonists, as well as their wealth and high social positions before the Revolution, brought them into close relationship with those who ruled the Republican Court, politically and socially.

Nearly every family, descendants of David Provost (10), then scattered throughout the Colonies, had furnished one or more of its brave sons to the Continental Army. The five sons of Jonathan (581), the ancestor of the writer, were in the army at the same time, most of them being under age when enlisting. Even these boys of 1776, consistent with their family motto, did and dared all that freemen should for "Liberty's Sake."

Note D.—PRÉVOST,—PROVOOST,—PROVOST.

Tradition, so far as it refers to our family concerns, is in general respected, and in most cases perfectly reliable. In passing down from generation to generation the minor points may become lost, or, if retained, distorted; yet there are certain points concerning the origin and migration of families that so strongly impress themselves upon the minds of all who bear the name, that even after several hundred years, in families who have held themselves not plebian, we may, with comparative safety, accept the traditionary account of their earliest known ancestor.

This fact has been very strikingly proved with regard to our own family, of which, until very recently, all that was asserted concerning it previous to 1638 was purely traditional, yet is corroborated in almost every point by an ancient manuscript just brought to light, being a genealogy of the family bearing date 1724.

Its author, David Provost, 1670-1725, being the grandson of our first ancestor in this country, had evidently every opportunity for verifying the statements therein contained, and as they, almost without exception, sustain all the traditionary accounts handed down to us, we find ourselves somewhat more convinced as to the appropriateness of making use of major points of like traditions for the purpose of inserting them in the places of missing links in the chain of direct evidence.

We therefore feel little hesitation in using such means in claiming kinship with a family which has been a distinguished one in England and America for a century and a half; and which we firmly believe is a branch of our own.

To our knowledge there never has been made, in this country, any attempts to trace the connection between the families spelling their names Provost and Prévost, respectively; possibly because these and other forms of the name exist in France to-day, making the task a difficult one.

We believe that we have discovered the connection, also the time of separation and change of spelling, which was about the year 1572.

In the manuscript before alluded to, dated 1724, the author states his obligation to numerous old documents; but says that he has been unable to find any account of the relatives of our "great ancestor," Guillelmus Provoost, who fled from Paris into Holland 1572, but that it was generally supposed that "for the most part they perished on St. Bartholomew's Day." Indeed, it is not improbable that Guillaume himself never knew what became of his immediate family.

Among the traditions of the Prévost family is one to the effect that, at the time of the Huguenot persecutions and massacres, their ancestor, Augustine, fled to Geneva, and that he had a brother who escaped into Holland.

Now the Prévost line can be directly traced to this Geneva exile [see Prévost Family, New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, January, 1882], and it is our conviction that his traditional brother was none other than our ancestor Guillaume.

If, moreover, we can establish that the names of these were identical before they left France, it cannot help but give plausibility to the above assumption.

It is reasonable to suppose that in going to Geneva, a French-speaking city, the name of Augustine suffered little or no change, and that his descendants, many of them distinguished officers and gentlemen in England and America, retained the spelling as well as the French pronunciation of the name; and this is adhered to by many of the family to this day, who are extremely careful that their name shall not be pronounced otherwise than Prévo.

With regard to our own branch, it is certain that the name suffered some change, just what cannot be positively stated, and the question must be dealt with precisely as are other matters of a similar nature, where the result, which would appear the most reasonable, is the accepted one, until refuted by direct proof.

The name Provoost, which our ancestors wore in Holland and in this country for nearly two hundred years, is assuredly not French, and it is probable that by 1750, the time when the change to Provost began gradually to take place, that the family were so entirely Hollandized and Anglicized as to have little idea as to the correctness of the change they were making.

We believe the change to have been a correct one, if it was their intention to make it an English name; but decidedly incorrect if they were intending to restore it to its original form, otherwise we should be unable to give any satisfactory explanation of its change by the Dutch.

Examining the records containing names of the Huguenot families who emigrated to Holland, we find them for the most part unchanged, even after a considerable residence there, except such names as had a significance or meaning which could be directly translated into the Dutch equivalents. This we find to have been exceedingly common, and, as an instance, we would cite as a good one that of the Le Grand family, which, in Holland, became De Groot; and had they afterwards turned it into English, as we believe our people to have done, the name here now would be The Great.

Considering, then, the change in our name to have been due to translation, we start by discovering that the word Provoost, in Dutch, means a Judge, Marshal or Mayor, the equivalent of our word Provost, which form we would, perhaps, be justified in using had we been of Dutch ancestry; but it is the original form that we are seeking, and continuing we find that the French word, bearing the same significance, was at that date spelled Prévost.

It is our belief that the present form of our name is due to two translations; and further, that our name was originally Prévost, and that the family now spelling their name in that form is a branch of our own.

BROOKLYN, April 2, 1893.

A. J. P., JR.

N. B.—Since the foregoing we have seen an article written by Vermont, "America Heraldica," in which he says: "The Prévost seigneurs, de la Javeliere and de la Simonie, in the Province of Poitou, France, emigrated for religious motives to Geneva, Switzerland, where the family still exists and prospers; a branch of the same stock removed to the Protestant Netherlands, and later to North America, where they also prospered. We have imprints of seals and letters a century old received from the European branch of the family, and leaving no possible doubt as to the connection.

Note E.—It was our intent, if possible, to obtain and print in the record portraits of the distinguished of the family; but we have been unable to get either originals or copies, such as would give satisfactory results, save and except that of the Bishop. And it gives us great pleasure to present to our readers a perfect picture of that noble man of our race, who, in his day and generation, was in all respects the peer of the foremost in America.
